Performing Throughout the Day: Gretchen Loda

Gretchen Loda is a classically trained soprano with over 28 years of singing experience and 25 years of formal vocal training. She holds a music degree from Keene State College, an accredited National Association of Schools of Music institution, with a focus in early music performance and musicology. Her repertoire spans Gregorian chant, Renaissance, Baroque, Classical, and Romantic works, as well as opera, patriotic music, folk traditions, and vintage styles. In addition to performance, she teaches voice with an emphasis on technique, vocal health, and stylistic interpretation.

Since 2007, Gretchen has worked in living history with a focus on colonial-era interpretation, and also performs vintage repertoire from the World War I, Edwardian, and 1920s–1940s periods. Her work combines historically informed performance, period costuming, and educational context, offering audiences both musical performance and insight into the background, technique, and cultural significance of the repertoire.
